DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff MARGARITA VEJO (“plaintiff”) alleges as follows:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. This is a civil rights and employment discrimination action whereby plaintiff seeks declaratory and injunctive relief and damages to vindicate and safeguard her fundamental constitutional and employment rights guaranteed under the United States Constitution and Oregon law. Among other claims, plaintiff brings this action for violations of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (“Section 1983”) arising under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, as well as violations arising under ORS 659A.030, 659A.403, 659A.406 and 345.240 and under Oregon common law.

2. Plaintiff was an outstanding student enrolled in the graduate School Counseling Program (the “Program”) at LEWIS & CLARK COLLEGE (“LEWIS & CLARK”) to obtain a Master of Education degree to be qualified as a licensed school counselor in Oregon. She worked diligently for almost two years to meet the Program’s requirements, including during internships at local elementary and middle schools and at Madison High School. Despite excelling in the Program, PORTLAND PUBLIC SCHOOLS (“PPS”) terminated her internship because of individual employee and institutional bias against her Christian beliefs and her Russian heritage as alleged herein. LEWIS & CLARK then terminated plaintiff from the Program because of the same or similar individual and institutional bias, despite her being close to completing her degree requirements. All defendants expressed and acted upon their unlawful belief that plaintiff could not succeed as a school counselor simply because of her Christian beliefs and values and her Russian heritage.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

3. This is an action for violations of the United States Constitution brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. This court has original jurisdiction over plaintiff's federal question claims under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343(3) and (4). This court also has supplemental jurisdiction over plaintiff's state claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

4. Venue is proper in Oregon's federal court in this division, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b), because the events giving rise to plaintiff's claims arose within this district.

5. Plaintiff timely provided PPS Defendants written tort claims notice pursuant to ORS 30.275 by letter dated April 10, 2014.

III. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

A. The Plaintiff

6. At all times material herein, plaintiff was a naturalized U.S. citizen from Russia, a devout Christian and a resident of Clark County, Washington. She was a graduate Master of Education degree candidate enrolled at LEWIS & CLARK from June 2012 through May 2014 and an intern at Madison High School, a public high school within the PPS district and under the control of supervision of PPS, in September and October 2013.

B. The Defendants

7. At all times material herein, PPS is a public school district located in Portland, Oregon and is a governmental entity capable of suing and being sued. PPS is an employer under ORS 659A.001 and ORS 659A.106, as well as a place of public accommodation within the meaning of ORS 659A.400.

8. At all times material herein, ROBERTA COOPER ("COOPER") was an employee of PPS acting intentionally and within the course and scope of her employment.

COOPER was Plaintiff's supervisor at Madison High School. COOPER is sued in her individual and official capacities.

9. At all times material herein, PETRA CALLIN ("CALLIN") was the principal of Madison High School, employed by PPS, and acting intentionally and within the course and scope of her employment. CALLIN is sued in her individual and official capacities.

10. All of the actions of the PPS, COOPER and CALLIN (the "PPS Defendants") alleged herein were conducted under color and pretense of law, including the statutes, ordinances, regulations of the state of Oregon and the policies, customs and usages of PPS.

11. At all times material herein, defendant LEWIS & CLARK was a public corporation organized under the laws of the state of Oregon and is an entity capable of suing and being sued. For purposes of the Program and this action, LEWIS & CLARK is a career school under ORS 345.010, as well as a place of public accommodation within the meaning of ORS 659A.400.

C. Vejo's Background

12. Plaintiff has a background in counseling. For thirteen years, she worked at the Immigrant and Refugee Community Organization ("IRCO") in Portland, Oregon, where plaintiff helped immigrants from all over the world acclimate and adjust to life in the U.S. Understanding people with diverse backgrounds, challenges, and needs were a key part of her job. During a significant portion of her time at IRCO, she served as an Academic Advisor and Career Counselor to immigrant high school students from schools throughout the Portland area, including students from Madison High School. She excelled at IRCO in all respects and received numerous accolades from coworkers and clients.

D. Plaintiff's Experiences at Lewis & Clark

13. Plaintiff enrolled at LEWIS & CLARK for the summer term 2012 to pursue a Master of Education degree in school counseling through the Program.

14. Professors and students in the Program made repeated comments denigrating Christians during classes while plaintiff was present. The number and content of negative comments towards Christians in plaintiff's classes at LEWIS & CLARK made her feel uncomfortable and insecure. Comments like "Oh, Christians, they are awful" were even made by professors, though students exhibited bias too. This created a climate of fear for plaintiff and caused her significant health issues stemming from stress.

15. Despite these challenges, plaintiff excelled in the Program, and maintained a GPA exceeding 3.9.

16. As part of the Program, LEWIS & CLARK required plaintiff to obtain several hundred hours of hands-on internship experience counseling students. In the spring of 2013, plaintiff successfully completed an internship counseling elementary and middle school students and received only positive feedback from her supervisors.

E. Plaintiff's Internship at Madison High School

17. LEWIS & CLARK had an ongoing relationship placing students in the Program as counseling interns at Madison High School. Starting in September 2013, plaintiff began an internship at Madison High School to counsel high school students. Unidentified school personnel assigned COOPER as plaintiff's mentor and supervisor. Their relationship began well, and plaintiff successfully integrated herself into the school community and students' lives.

18. Plaintiff and her coworkers got to know each other on a personal level during the internship. COOPER, CALLIN and others learned plaintiff is a Russian native and a devout Christian with sincerely-held religious beliefs and values.

19. During the internship, plaintiff noticed and experienced a significant emphasis the school placed on sexual identity and identifying students in a category other than heterosexual. For example, the sexual education curriculum placed a disproportionate emphasis on sexual identification and student participation in lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender school activities. Support for same-sex marriage among school staff and administration was also made clear by initiative petitions circulating through the break areas, and staff openly shared information about which PPS employees supported a same-sex marriage initiative.

20. Much of this emphasis emanated from COOPER and her office. COOPER was aggressive in expressing her views concerning sexual orientation. COOPER advised plaintiff early in their working relationship that she was a lesbian living with a female partner. COOPER created an environment in the counseling center where sexual identity was frequently a topic of conversation, and even included and involved substitute teachers who were not a regular part of the school staff.

21. On or about Thursday, October 17, 2013, plaintiff and COOPER had a conversation during which plaintiff inquired about the school's teaching of sexual health. Given the emphasis COOPER and other Madison High School staff placed on sexual orientation, plaintiff privately asked COOPER what she considered age-appropriate curriculum in light of controversial issues surrounding religion, homosexuality, and sexual identity. Plaintiff privately asked whether diverse views were taught and tolerated and whether school counseling there allowed any room for plaintiff's own beliefs, values and self-identity, given her roots and values as a Russian and a devout Christian.

22. In response to these inquiries, COOPER immediately became combative, accusing: (1) plaintiff of being judgmental because she was a Christian and a native Russian; (2) Christians of being judgmental in general; and (3) Russians of being judgmental in general. COOPER then privately concluded plaintiff was unqualified to be a school counselor because of her disagreement with plaintiff's beliefs, values and heritage. These accusations were later incorporated in a letter to LEWIS & CLARK, a true copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

23. On information and belief, COOPER provided CALLIN a false statement alleging plaintiff had referred to homosexuals as "diseased" and relayed her opinion that plaintiff could not perform as a school counselor because of her values, beliefs and heritage. CALLIN was complicit in and supported, if not required, COOPER's decision to terminate plaintiff's internship at Madison High School.

24. Shortly after this conversation, plaintiff's LEWIS & CLARK supervising professor visited Madison High School and met with COOPER to discuss plaintiff's performance. The supervising professor also observed plaintiff counsel a high school student during the visit. The supervising professor praised plaintiff's counseling after the session and shared that COOPER also liked her work and trusted her with students.

25. A few days later, on or about October 21, 2013, the PPS Defendants terminated plaintiff's internship in a letter to LEWIS & CLARK (see Exhibit A) expressing their unlawful belief plaintiff could not perform satisfactorily as a school counselor because of her Christian faith and her Russian heritage.

F. Lewis & Clark's Termination of Plaintiff's Candidacy for a School Counselor Degree

26. In response to Exhibit A, LEWIS & CLARK terminated plaintiff's candidacy from the Program, even though plaintiff vigorously denied the PPS Defendants' false allegations orally and in writing. Plaintiff informed LEWIS & CLARK that COOPER and other employees at Madison High School made anti-Christian and anti-Russian remarks, but LEWIS & CLARK refused to investigate the PPS Defendants' allegations or plaintiff's responses thereto.

27. After the termination of plaintiff's PPS internship, LEWIS & CLARK refused to place plaintiff in another internship to allow her to complete her chosen Master of Education degree which, on information and belief, it did for other students in plaintiff's position. Instead, LEWIS & CLARK utilized its academic disciplinary process to force plaintiff to change her major, drop out of the school counseling program, and instead pursue a degree that would not qualify her to be licensed as a school counselor. Plaintiff recently graduated from LEWIS & CLARK in July 2014 with a Master of Education degree that renders her ineligible to be licensed as a school counselor.

28. As a result of the defendants' actions, plaintiff has suffered irreparable harm, including economic damages from lost wages (past and future), lost earning capacity, and student loan repayment obligations, as well as noneconomic damages arising from emotional distress, loss of enjoyment of life, and damage to her personal and professional reputation in an amount to be proved at trial under 42 U.S.C. §1983, ORS 345.240 and ORS 659A.885 as alleged herein.
